Our Idol. Close the door lightly, Bridle the breath, Our little earth angel Is talking with death. Gently he woos her, She wishes to stay, His arms are about her-He bears her away ! Music comes floating Down from the dome; Angels are chanting The sweet we come home. Come, stricken weeper ! Come to the bed, Gaze on the sleeper-Our idol is dead ! Smooth out the ringlets, Close the blue eye .--No wonder such beauty Was claimed in the sky. Cross the hands gently O'er the white breast, So like a child spirit Straved from the blest. Bear her out softly, This idol of ours;

I was by no means satisfied with one experiment. In a little while I saw one of the most brazen sppropriators of small things (he was especially hard | me away with it. on lunches and drinks-free) in all Cincinnati. . " Now," said I, " is my chance."

This customer had an article in his hand, which might in courtesy be styled the "ghost of an umbrella " and cotton at that. With a grandiloquent air, he deposited it right along side of mine, and went to the bar. There he picked up a treat(it | was his remark. was election time) and ate crackers and cheese enormously .- Thence to the reading room, with my | ing of an absent acquaintance-" a man who away eye still on him, and in less than a minute, with a from his family and never sends them a farthing! shrug, and buttoning up his coat an extra button, Call that kindness?" he passed in a rapid business manner to the door, picked up my umbrella, with scarcely a glance, as he went along. I was on hand. With a sudden rold's keenest and wittiest shafts. The hero of movement he attemted to raise it; no go!

Again! Still a farlure! With a decision perfectly Napoleonic, and worthy of the occasion, he his own writings and those of Goldsmith's. was about to tear away the slight obstruction, when I stepped up and said :

"Don't do it! I'll lend you the key!" " Ah! Mr. Beard, Ha! Strange mistakethought it was my own. Good device; think I'll adopt it."

And with the most perfect ease he put my umbrella down, took his own, and vamosed. I was satisfied. I had found out how to keep an

A RIVAL'S VENGEANCE.—Two Russian ladies of the highest rank, the Countesses of Z. and X., had for some years been united in the fastest friendship. The Countess Z. (Russian ladies, by the way, are neither as cold or chaste as the snows of their northern clime) had a lover, who proved faithless, and abandoned her for her friend, the Countess X.

Madame Z. was not long in discovering who was the preferred one, and concealing with feminine tact her rage and jealousy, she met her rival with smiles.

. Ma chere,' she said, I am really delighted that the Prince loves you, and hope you may long retain his affection; but your beautiful hair is getting thin, you must take care of it. Here is an invaluable pomade, which I use myself. I would not give it to any one but you; use it, and your hair will be as luxuriant as ever.'

The Countess X. embraced her with thanks, and hurried home to apply the revivifying compound. In two days she was completely bald. Now, who could be faithful to a mistress with a wig? The Prince returned to his first love, and the poor Countess X. still lives to ponder on the falsity of female friendship and her own capillary covering

TIT FOR TAT .- Some of the English journals having published articles accusing Russia of a design to assume an aggressive attitude in Asia, the St. Petersburg Gazette, in a series of articles upon " the mission of Russia," boldly avows and claims that as the mission of civilizing Southern Asia belongs to England, so the mission of civilizing Northern Asia belongs to Russia, for reasons assigned. It adds that any attempt to interrupt Russia in the fulfilment of that mission would end in the destruction not of Russia but of the power making the attempt, and that "Russia will be no more vanquished by England on this ground than she was in the last Furopean war." Pretty plain speaking.

DIVORCES .- Eighteen divorces were granted by the Oregon Legislature at its recent session. Men have been in the habit in that territory for a number of years past, of marrying-not a wife, but a quarter section of land; and it is quite natural that the land being secured, they should soon tire of the incumberance on it .- Exch.

BROAD SCOTCH .- A Scotch lady entered a store part of the boat do you wish to go in-cabin or in Boston and inquired for a table cloth of a dam | deck?" . Hang your cabin, said the gentleman broad pattern, "We have some pretty broad," from Indiana, 'I live in a cabin at home; give me was the reply of the astonished salesman; but the best you've got.' that "dam broad" was the Scotch term for chequered pattern.

The Lace Merchant's Dog.

Who would have imagined that a dog had been made servicable as a clerk, and thus gained for his master upwards of a hundred thousand crowns? And yet an incident like this happened a few years since in Europe. One of those industrious beings who know how to make a chaldron of costs out of a billet of wood, determined, in extreme poverty, to engage in trade. He preferred that of the merchandise which occupied the least space, and was calculated to yield the most profit. He borrowed a small sum of money from a friend, and repairing to Flanders, he there bought pieces of lace, which, without any danger, he smuggled into France in the following

He trained an active spaniel to his purpose. He caused him to be shaved, and procured for him the skin of another dog, of the same hue and the same shape. He then rolled the lace around the body of his dog, and put over it the garment of the stranger so adroitly, that it was impossible to discover the trick. The lace thus arranged in his pedestrian band-box, he would say to his docile messenger, "forward my friend." At these words the dog would start and pass boldly through the gates of Malines or Valenciennes, in the face of the vigilant officers placed there to prevent smuggling. Having passed the bounds, he would wait for his master at a little distance in the open country. There they mutually caressed and feasted, and the merchant placed his packages in a place of security, renewing his occupation as necessity required. Such was the success of the smuggler, that in five or six years he amassed a handsome fortune, and kept his coach. Envy pursues the prosperous. A mischievous neighbor betrayed the lace merchant; and notwithstanding his efforts to disguise his dog, he was suspected, watched, and discov-

THE MARRIAGE SERVICE-Sir John Bowring, the British Ambassador to China, who, by the way, wrote "Watchman, Tell us of the Night," as well as many other charming pieces of church psalmody, is said to be not only a very eccentric, but a very opinionated man. On one osccasion he was anied it, of the marriage service as prescribed by the Church of England. "Look at it," said he, "with this ring I thee wed-that's sorcery; with my body I thee worship-that's idolatry; and with all my worldly goods I thee endow-that's a lie ?"

CASE OF PROFOUND SYMPATHY .- The wife of a gentleman in Syracuse (N. Y.) died a short time since. Among the sympathizing friends was a young lady from Auburn, a stranger to him. The sympathy of this young lady made such an impression upon the heart-broken husband that the next day after the funeral, he consoled himself by taking her to his arms to supply the vacuum.
